FAR EAST

1. Report of "radio rockets" at Pyongyang corrected:

On 27 March, the Current Intelligence Bulletin reported North Korean Air Force messages concerning the movement of "radio rockets" from Sariwon to Pyongyang, and commented on the possibility that they were guided missiles. Retranslations now show that the messages actually referred to the movement of radar equipment.

There have been previous operational indications that Communist forces in North Korea have been using radar. The possibility that some form of guided missile, although perhaps only in test quantities, is being used in Korea still exists. //
