

or shore command is a function of the command to which delivered. If call signs are assigned for joint use to particular commanders, as well as to particular ships, airplanes and shore commands, such 1144) commander call signs may also be employed to indicate routing, addressees and originators.

c. Use of clear or cryptographic language.—The general rules governing the use of clear and cryptographic language are set forth in subsection IV of this chapter, wherein communication security is discussed.

f. Operating instructions and procedure.—Operating instructions are special instructions for transmitting, receiving, and when required, for relaying messages. These instructions are set forth in a separate restricted pamphlet entitled, "Joint Army and Navy Radio Procedure."

g. Time.

(1) The time of origin is the time at which the message is released or authenticated by the originator. If this time does not appear on the message it will be the time when the message is filed for transmission.

(2) The time of origin in joint communications is expressed in the 24-hour clock system and transmitted as a group of four figures, the first two digits representing the hours from midnight and the last two the minutes past the hour. Examples: 6:00 A. M. is 0600 and 7:45 P. M. is 1945.

(3) For communication within the Army, the 12-hour clock system is used. Examples: 8:00 A. M. is 800 A, and 7:45 P. M. is 745 P.

(4) For communication within the Navy, Greenwich civil time (G. C. T.) is used in headings of messages.

(5) Unless otherwise prescribed, the time of origin in the headings of messages in joint communication will be Greenwich civil time (G. C. T.).

h. Date.

(1) The date is expressed for joint communication purposes by two figures preceding the time of origin, indicating the day of the month. If the date number is less than ten, it is always preceded by zero. For example, the first day of the month is 01, and the tenth day is 10. "071620" means date was 7th day of month, and time of origin was 1620.

(2) The month and year may be added to the date and time of origin group when necessary for reference purposes in the text of messages. For example: "Your 071620 DEC 1938" means "Referring to your message, with time of origin 1620 on the 7th day of December 1938 * * *".
